Introduction

As a visiting faculty member at the Legal Services Authority in Dhule, Pandit Ghanshyam Ji worked under the guidance of Justice Dr. J.U. Dongre and Session Judge R.H. Mohammed to organize legal awareness camps across India, enlightening thousands of people about their constitutional rights.

Today, Dr. Pandit Ghanshyam Ji continues to work as a prominent speaker for the Advocate Conference of India.

In collaboration with the Maharashtra Legal Services Authority in Mumbai, he has also produced a Marathi short film called "Bandini" on the topic of domestic violence and exploitation of women.

The film, directed by Jitesh Milind Sonavane, was well-received by the judiciary department.

Dr. Pandit Ghanshyam Ji holds an honorary doctorate, but his social responsibility is no less than that of a university or its vice-chancellor.

He has completed post-graduation in nine subjects and secured the highest second-class grade in two subjects.

Dr. Pandit Ghanshyam Ji believes that during the COVID-19 pandemic, millions of women were victims of domestic violence and exploitation. Even today, women face mental health struggles due to climate change and global warming. In rural and urban areas, women are paid minimal wages and face gender-based discrimination. Through his awareness programs, Pandit Ghanshyam Ji emphasizes the significant contribution women make to the country's GDP through their domestic work and caregiving responsibilities.

Despite facing several life-threatening attacks from orthodox and patriarchal elements, Pandit Ghanshyam Ji continues to work tirelessly, inspired by great leaders like Maharana Pratap Singh, Chhatrapati Shivaji Maharaj, Fatima Sheikh, Dr. Babasaheb Ambedkar, and Dr. Yashwant Manohar Pratibha Ranade. Dr Rupa bodhi Kulkarni, His work will serve as a guiding light for future generations of women's rights activists.

Dr. Pandit Ghanshyam Ji Thorat, a renowned social activist and singer, has been invited several times as a chief guide for various workshops organized by the university. Recently, he addressed a gathering of women at the Dr. Babasaheb Ambedkar Institute of Philosophy, Pune Unit, Dhule, Renowned journalist and President of Daksh Patrikar Sangh, Dr. Nagasen Jwala Bagul, presided over several events...

Where dr Ghanshyam emphasized the plight of women in today's society.

Dr. Pandit Ghanshyam Ji stated that women are victims of depression and frustration due to their multiple responsibilities. They face health hazards due to polluted air and water, and are exploited in various social, communal, and economic struggles.

Despite government initiatives, women's rights continue to be neglected. Dr. Ghansham Thorat criticized the government for merely presenting statistical data and not taking concrete actions to address these issues.

He highlighted the deplorable condition of schools for Scheduled Castes and Scheduled Tribes, where basic facilities like sanitation and libraries are lacking.

Dr. Ghansham Thorat's efforts to promote social justice and women's rights have been recognized nationally and internationally. His biography has been included in the American General Index, and a research paper on his life and work has been presented at an international conference.

Honorable Mahendra Khairnar, a social leader from Sindkheda Tahsil, has recommended Dr. Ghansham Thorat's name for the Padma Shri award, which has been forwarded to the central government by Cabinet Minister Honorable Rana Jayakumar Rawal saheb.

In the environment of Macquarie University, Dr. Pandit Ghanshyam Ji's paramount disciple, software engineer Vikas Pawar (Sonar, originally from Mahindale Tahsil, Dhule) and Rohit Verma, an actor and director from Sydney, Australia, have published Chitrekha Kaushal's (former Head of the Department of Philosophy, Nagpur University) book "Pushkarniya Rakshak, Vaishali Janpadkalyani Ambapali; Lichchhavi Putra Bhagwan Mahavir and Baudhd Dharm".

Dr. Pandit Ghanshyam Ji has written a highly insightful and emotive preface for this book, which portrays the comprehensive ideological revolution of women's lives. In the preface, Dr. Pandit Ghanshyam Ji says, "Chitrekha's philosophical analysis is a worldwide revolutionary rebellion, which is the scripture of its own liberation."

"Notably, whereas Indian male-dominated literary streams have been conspiring to establish the Manu-led varna, caste supremacy-predominance system, the Nagvanshi Theri Gatha has created a clean and transparent humanitarian literature by taking on the role of a rational, intellectual, and egalitarian worldview."

"Going forward, foreign literature has followed suit. This authentic matriarchal ideological system was first given its due place by Emperor Ashoka on Indian soil, making it the pioneering feminist literature at the global level."

"Chitrlekha Kaushal has taken on this bold role, and through this book, has warned and alerted the entire world and democratic nations about the concerns of democracy."

"In doing so, she has attempted to convey indirectly that the powerful backgrounds that once established democracy worldwide no longer exist. The Electronic Voting Machine (EVM) has hijacked democracy, and its anarchic, uncontrolled capitalist forces and global organizations have led to unemployment, increasing religious, social, and ideological violence, poverty, rampant female exploitation, and the bullying of established media."

"The ignorance and lack of awareness of the working-class society have become a significant cause of the decline of matriarchal culture. Without understanding this comprehensive role, a thorough revolution cannot occur. The historical character Ambapali is a representative example!"

The beacon of women's liberation is the Nagvanshi thought system! Whose thoughtful vibrations of the intellect make the exploited understand their rebellious mentality, and today, women worldwide must break free from the chains of ignorance that obstruct their liberation, where they themselves are the creators of the world and the universe.

In "Letters of a Father to a Daughter," Nehruji tells Indiraji, "Indiraji, you are the royal heroine and leader of this country." Indiraji, believing in her father's words, wins the election from Chickmagalur, a land of matriarchal culture, and becomes the Prime Minister, proving it.

Can't the OBC, Scheduled Caste, and Scheduled Tribe women of today adopt this belief and become the prime heroine of their own lives, if not the Prime Minister of the country? In other words, when Bharat Ratna Dr. Babasaheb Ambedkar, the architect of India, tells all the exploited and working-class people, "Go write on the walls of your homes that you have to become the ruling community of this country," have we truly implemented his great statement?

Honesty demands that all exploited and working-class women must know their matriarchal cultural history, rooted in their elemental being, and fight for their rights and complete freedom. Evolutionary psychology, whose background is sociobiology by E.O. Wilson, has proven that biologically, women are more capable and tolerant than men.

Natalie Angier, a science journalist for The New York Times, has proven this worldwide in her book "Women: An Intimate Geography," creating a sensation globally. Pushkarniya Rakshak, Vaishali Janpadkalyani Ambapali, Lichchhavi Putra Bhagwan Mahavir, and Bauddh Dharm. Here is the word-to-word translation:

Gabrielle Dietrich (Reflections on the Women's Movement in India - Religion, Ecology, and Development (1992)) has also said in her practical essay that, in patriarchal capitalist systems, women's labor exploitation, gender exploitation, and constant subjugation of their mentality have been ongoing. Even today, established media outlets have transformed women into commodities, and so-called religious scriptures have controlled their reproductive capacity. The global economy has perpetually been unjust to them.

Dietrich's argument reveals the various walls that construct feminist bondage before us. Gail Omvedt first pointed out that all religions are patriarchal, and even in Buddhist society, there has been no adequate prohibition on female exploitation. Gail Omvedt indicates that, even today, our challenges on the ground of women's liberation have not ended.

From the Indus Valley to the republican system, matrilineal, democratic, agricultural revolution, Lichchhavi Putra, the creator of the Theory of Relativity, Bhagwan Mahavir, and the contemporary relevance of women's empowerment in modern politics - there is a need for serious contemplation! Every woman must have the constant conviction that her self-respect must be kept alive continuously!! Here is the word-to-word translation:

In the cultural heritage, the great sage Bhagwan Mahavir and Bhagwan Buddha's magnificent ideas, written against the caste system, need to be adopted today. However, the irony is that the current Jain community does not want to bring about women's liberation or social change. Is this indifference, bad faith, or ignorance? Only a true Jain or non-Jain can answer

In the cultural heritage, the great sage Bhagwan Mahavir and Bhagwan Buddha's magnificent ideas, written against the caste system, need to be adopted today. However, the irony is that the current Jain community does not want to bring about women's liberation or social change. Is this indifference, bad faith, or ignorance? The global pandemic of Corona has devastated the lives of ordinary people worldwide, while capitalist forces have become billionaires. This disparity is at its peak. Whether it's Corona or Omicron, the economic reasons behind these biological disciplines are hidden. Any aware citizen is well aware of this.

You will be surprised to know that behind the construction of war backgrounds between nations, a massive market economy is hidden. The purchase and sale of $70 million (3.5 lakh crore) worth of arms is based on these issues. Capitalist nations have always focused on such businesses in war marketing.

The established media is also playing its role by creating sensational news and an environment. US President Biden invited countries that believe in democracy and those that don't to the Summit for Democracy, including Pakistan, Ukraine, and France. America's Freedom House and Agnesstein institutions have openly proved that India has only a pseudo-democracy.

This remark expresses concern for India, which has the world's largest constitution and democracy. India's situation regarding individual freedom, women's exploitation, and child exploitation is becoming increasingly serious, making it a pressing concern.

The increasing exploitation of capitalist forces under the concept of conglomerates, unprecedented disparities, and bad faith have put India into a deep slumber. It is now the duty of every humanist to awaken such nations!!

The criteria for measuring the development of developing countries, as stated by revered Dr. Babasaheb Ambedkar, lies in the progress of women's rights, freedom, and empowerment. Due to the severe disparities in economic, religious, social, political, cultural, and commercial aspects, the democratic current born out of women's power has been devastated in today's time.

Historical figures like Ambapali are great values in our energy, whose creative rebellion against global exploitation is a magnificent idea that needs to be implemented through the same vibrations, reflecting our current struggles for women's liberation and the freedom of the working class

Conclusion

Dr. Pandit Ghanshyam Ji Thorat is a true icon for social justice and women's rights, and his tireless efforts continue to inspire countless individuals.
